Four years after the passing of Pastor P R Baby on 3 November 2022, the vision that inspired his life and ministry continues to find expression through P R Baby Foundation.

A visionary's legacy is not measured merely by what he accomplished during his lifetime, but by what continues to grow through the lives he inspired.

Pastor P R Baby carried a deep conviction that lasting transformation comes through faith, education, empowerment and service to people. His vision was to build communities, develop individuals and create opportunities for a better future, particularly among underserved communities in Northeast India.

A FRIEND, A GUIDE AND A FAITHFUL SERVANT OF GOD

Pastor P. R. Baby, affectionately known by everyone as “Baby Sir,” was not only a gifted servant of God but also a dear friend and trusted adviser to me. His life was a remarkable testimony of faith and obedience to God’s calling. Despite having a career as a nuclear scientist, he chose to leave his profession and dedicate his life to ministry, establishing Faith City Church of God in Kochi, Kerala. Through his vision, spiritual gifts, and God’s abundant favor, the church grew into a thriving ministry with numerous branches across Kerala, affiliated with the Church of God.

When I became the Overseer of Kerala State, Baby Sir was a tremendous source of help, encouragement, and guidance to me. His wisdom, friendship, and willingness to support the ministry were invaluable. His wife also faithfully served the Church of God as the State Secretary of the Ladies Ministry, making their family’s contribution to the church especially meaningful.

Reflections on my father, Pastor P.R.Baby

God delivered the nation of Israel from slavery with an outstretched arm. They witnessed extraordinary wonders and miracles, yet they could not let go of their slave mentality. Even after the bodies of their former masters, the Egyptians, washed up on the shore, the only way they knew how to live was as slaves. Though physically liberated, they continued to think and respond as slaves. How do we know this? Every time they encountered a challenge in the wilderness, their immediate response was to return to what they knew best - slavery. God had delivered them from Egypt, but Egypt had yet to be delivered from them.

Our thoughts govern our actions. As Jesus taught, it is not what goes into a person that defiles them, but what comes out of them, for out of the heart proceed evil thoughts (Matthew 15:18–19). Unless we allow God to sanctify us and renew our minds, we will continue to live as slaves, giving the devil an opportunity to undermine one of our most precious possessions in Christ - our freedom.

In Romans 6, the Apostle Paul presents three fundamental principles in the process of sanctification: Know, Reckon, and Yield. These principles engage three essential dimensions of our being - the mind, the will, and our actions.

1. Know — The Mind (Romans 6:3)

First, our minds must be renewed (Romans 12:2). Our thinking needs to change. The deceitfulness of sin often leads to forgetfulness of Christ's finished work. We are called to keep fresh in our minds the memory of what God has delivered us from and the reality of who we are in Christ. Knowing begins with knowledge. Ever since the Garden of Eden, humanity has had a tendency to pursue knowledge independently of God, seeking it through ungodly means. We are quick to forget God's plans, purposes, and promises for our lives, allowing our circumstances and desires to shape our thinking rather than the truth of His Word. We must learn to think not as slaves seeking freedom, but as children of God who have already been set free.

2. Reckon — The Will (Romans 6:11)

The Christian's will stems from a determination to live according to what we have come to know through God's Word. This is not willpower, but faith power. To reckon is to align ourselves with what God has already declared to be true. It is to adopt a position of faith before that truth becomes evident in our everyday experience. Faith does not wait for our feelings or circumstances to validate God's Word. It takes God at His Word and chooses to live accordingly. Knowing is understanding the truth; reckoning is choosing to stand upon it.

3. Yield — The Action (Romans 6:13)

Yielding is the natural progression of the renewed mind and the faith-directed will. What we know in our minds and embrace through faith must ultimately find expression in our actions. An important aspect of yielding is learning to redirect our desires toward righteousness. Paul challenges us in Romans 6:19 to offer ourselves to righteousness with the same intentionality with which we once offered ourselves to sin. Consider a simple exercise: What is the process we typically go through before indulging in sin, whether it be an addiction or some other sinful pleasure? We think about it, anticipate it, imagine the satisfaction it might bring, and sometimes even plan ahead to experience it. Our thoughts, emotions, desires, and actions become aligned in pursuit of that pleasure. What if we applied that same intentionality and anticipation to serving God?

Do we imagine the possibilities of being used by Him? Do we eagerly anticipate opportunities to serve others? Do we plan ahead to accomplish His work? Do we derive pleasure from contemplating the fulfillment of His will? Does the thought of bringing joy to our Heavenly Father excite us? What if doing God's will occupied our imagination as much as the pleasures of this world once did? This is why the greatest commandment is to love the Lord our God with all our heart, with all our soul, and with all our mind (Matthew 22:37–38). For whatever captures our hearts ultimately commands our thoughts, our time, our energy, and our actions.

My father, Pastor P. R. Baby, exemplified the process of sanctification. Through his life, he showed me how the mind, the will, and one's actions align when a person works out his salvation with fear and trembling. His renewed mind was evident in the confidence and clarity with which he thought. He always had big plans because he believed in a big God. With his mind governed by the Word of God and enriched by the gifts of the Holy Spirit, he was a man of solutions. He always had an answer, he always had a next step, and above all, he always had confidence in his God.

His faith-directed will was extraordinary. Though physically a man of short stature, his faith stood taller than that of many. His faith power was contagious. He put his faith to work through his declarations. When he commanded in faith, things happened. When he bound on earth, it was bound in heaven; when he loosed on earth, it was loosed in heaven. In my 44 years of knowing him as his son, one thing I never witnessed was my father being shaken - not because of his worldly strength, but because of his spiritual strength. His confidence was not in the absence of adversity, but in the presence of his God.

Finally, he fantasized about doing God's work. Ministry was his first calling; everything else came second. He delighted in giving God his very best. It was abundantly clear where his treasure lay. He was a shepherd who would go to extraordinary lengths for his sheep, often taking unimaginable personal risks for their sake. The sheep God had entrusted to his care were his treasure, and his heart followed without hesitation. Serving God was not merely his responsibility; it was his passion, his pleasure, and his greatest delight.

The clarity of his mind, the determination of his will, and his insatiable desire to serve God continue to challenge me to this day. I strive every day to follow in his footsteps and walk the path of faith, devotion, and service that he so courageously blazed for me, our family and for Faith City Church.

My father did not merely preach sanctification; he lived it. He showed me what it means to have a mind renewed by God's truth, a will anchored in faith, and a heart that delights in doing God's will.

A FRIEND, A GUIDE AND A FAITHFUL SERVANT OF GOD

His sudden passing was a tremendous loss to the Church of God and a deeply personal loss to me. I will always cherish the friendship, counsel, and encouragement he gave me during an important season of my ministry. Although he was promoted to glory four years ago, his legacy continues through the churches he established, the lives he touched, and the ministry he helped build. I thank God for the privilege of knowing Baby Sir personally. His life of faith, vision, and service will always remain an inspiration to me.

A Divine Encounter That Changed the Journey

I consider it part of God's divine plan that I had the privilege of meeting Pastor P R Baby in 2018 at the wedding of the son of Pastor Vijaykumar of Mirzapur, Uttar Pradesh. That meeting marked the beginning of a meaningful association and a shared commitment to a larger mission.

During our conversation, Pastor Baby shared his burden for the people of North India and his vision for expanding the work of ministry and community transformation, particularly in the Northeastern states, including the Garo Hills of Meghalaya. His passion, clarity of purpose and commitment to the region deeply moved me. He encouraged me to become part of this vision, and our association gradually developed through frequent conversations and personal interactions.

Pastor Baby had a special desire to extend the mission to other parts of Northeast India and North India. Although circumstances did not allow us to fulfil this particular plan during his lifetime, his vision continued to inspire our subsequent engagement.

At his invitation, I also began associating with the Hindi Bible College. We had opportunities to meet on several occasions, including at my residence in Ernakulam, at the Bible College in Karukutty, and later at my son's wedding, which he officiated before his visit to the United States. I remained in regular contact with him until his health began to decline. His passing on 3 November 2022 was a profound loss. Yet, the vision he entrusted to others did not end with his departure.

Carrying the Vision Forward

Following Pastor P R Baby's passing, his elder son, Dr. Giby Raphael, took forward his father's vision through P R Baby Foundation. I became closely involved in its Northeast India initiatives, focusing on training community workers, strengthening local leadership, monitoring field activities and improving rural livelihoods.

The Vision: Empowering Communities from Within

Our goal is to build informed, capable and self-reliant communities through capacity building, adult education, field training and community participation.

Five key interventions form the foundation of this approach:

1. Adult Education: Creating learning opportunities for adults, improving literacy and equipping individuals with essential knowledge and skills for everyday life and livelihood development.

2. Village Knowledge Centres: Establishing grassroots resource centres that connect rural communities with information, learning opportunities, development services and essential knowledge.

3. Field Training for Rural Communities: Organising practical, need-based training programmes to improve livelihood opportunities, promote sustainable practices and strengthen economic resilience.

4. Capacity Building of Community Workers: Training and mentoring local workers to plan, implement and monitor development activities effectively, while nurturing local leadership and accountability.

5. Leaders' Meetings: Bringing together community leaders and key stakeholders to share experiences, review progress, identify challenges and develop collective strategies for community transformation.

These interventions are interconnected. Together, they seek to build a development model in which knowledge leads to empowerment, that strengthens livelihoods, and capable local leadership sustains community progress.

The Progress: Expanding Horizons

By God's grace, we have made encouraging progress in the Garo Hills of Meghalaya and are extending our initiatives to Nagaland, Mizoram, Tirunelveli and Kanyakumari. Our priority is to strengthen existing programmes while building sustainable community development models in new regions.

Our next milestones include:

- Strengthening and expanding Village Knowledge Centres as grassroots development hubs.
- Scaling up adult literacy and continuing education initiatives.
- Developing a structured training and mentoring system for community workers.
- Introducing need-based livelihood and skill development programmes.
- Strengthening monitoring, evaluation and community participation.
- Building partnerships with local institutions, churches and development organisations.

Our long-term aspiration is to develop a network of empowered communities supported by trained local leaders, knowledge resources and sustainable livelihood opportunities.

A Vision Entrusted to Generations

I remain grateful to Pastor Baby for his friendship, guidance and inspiration, and to Dr. Giby Raphael for providing the leadership to continue this mission. As 2 Timothy 2:2 reminds us, a vision must be entrusted to faithful people who will equip others to carry it forward.

The vision was entrusted to one generation, embraced by another, and must now be passed on to generations yet to come.

To God be the glory for what He has done, what He is doing, and what He will continue to accomplish through this mission.

THE LEGACY IN ACTION: FOUR YEARS OF PROGRESS
From a Founder's Vision to a Continuing Mission

Following his departure, P R Baby Foundation emerged as an institutional platform to carry this vision forward. Registered as a Section 8 company in October 2023, the Foundation is progressively translating this commitment into sustainable programmes, partnerships and community initiatives. Over the past four years, the journey has been one of strengthening existing commitments, initiating new interventions and building a collective mission.

The legacy is taking shape through several interconnected initiatives:

Village Knowledge Centres (VKC)

Envisioned as community-based resource centres, VKCs seek to bring knowledge, information, learning opportunities and development services closer to rural communities. The long-term vision is to establish 100 centres as catalysts for grassroots transformation.

Kings Caravan 2.0

Taking the message of hope and social responsibility to communities through a mobile campaign platform, Kings Caravan continues its anti-drug awareness and youth mobilisation efforts, inspiring young people to make positive life choices.

Project Gilead

Driven by the conviction that healthcare should reach everyone, Project Gilead seeks to extend medical services to remote and underserved communities through Mobile Medical Units and community health outreach.

Micro Schools

Recognising education as a foundation for transformation, the Micro Schools initiative seeks to bring accessible learning opportunities to children in remote villages, particularly in South Garo Hills, Meghalaya.

Gasa English Medium Higher Secondary School (GEMS)

Education remains one of the most significant expressions of the vision. From its commitment to rural education in East Garo Hills, GEMS continues to create opportunities for children through quality education. Its 100% success in the Class 10 board examination and expansion into higher secondary education reflect the growing impact of this commitment.

Elevate A Million

Complementing the broader development vision, Elevate A Million Pvt. Ltd. is a related social-impact business initiative focused on improving farmers' livelihoods through sustainable agriculture, agri-tech, value addition, contract farming and market linkages. Its ambition is to elevate one million farming families by 2033.

Growth Mindset Programme

Through leadership development and capacity-building initiatives, this programme seeks to nurture responsible leaders, inspire positive thinking and equip individuals to become agents of change in their communities.

Y Triple E Worldwide

THE JOURNEY CONTINUES

These initiatives represent more than individual programmes; together, they reflect a continuing commitment to human development and sustainable community transformation. Each initiative contributes to a larger purpose: creating opportunities, strengthening communities and building a future in which individuals and families can flourish.

The journey is still unfolding. There are communities to reach, children to educate, young people to inspire, patients to serve and families to empower. This calls for greater collaboration, committed leadership, strategic partnerships and the collective participation of people who believe in the vision.

Four years may have passed since Pastor P R Baby's departure, but the mission he inspired remains alive. What began as a personal conviction is becoming a collective responsibility and an enduring institutional commitment.

The legacy is not simply something we remember; it is something we must continue to build.

The vision lives on. The mission continues. The future awaits.

Institutional development is not merely about building organisations; it is about bringing together people, professional expertise and partnerships to create lasting impact.

An Unexpected Connection, A New Beginning

For the past twelve years, I have been associated with the academic and research community in Meghalaya, serving as a Professor at North-Eastern Hill University (NEHU) and its College of Horticulture campus at Tura, West Garo Hills. My professional engagement in the region has given me opportunities to understand the challenges, aspirations and development needs of communities across Northeast India.

In 2024, an unexpected encounter opened a new chapter in my journey. During a meeting at Tura, I had the opportunity to reconnect with some alumni of the Allahabad Agricultural Institute, where I had completed my graduation in Agriculture. They were my seniors at the institution and had come to Meghalaya to participate in the community development initiatives of P R Baby Foundation.

What began as an academic connection soon developed into an opportunity to participate in a larger development mission.

Connecting with a Vision Beyond Boundaries

Although I did not have the privilege of knowing the late Pastor P R Baby personally, my interaction with his elder son, Dr. Giby Raphael, became a significant turning point. Through our conversations, I gained a deeper understanding of the vision, commitment and community development mission that Pastor Baby had initiated.

I was particularly impressed by the Foundation's commitment to reaching underserved communities, strengthening local capacities and creating sustainable opportunities for development. The opportunity to associate with this mission gave a new dimension to my professional engagement in Northeast India.

Having lived and worked in the region for several years, I had developed valuable academic, professional and community connections. I realised that these networks could be meaningfully mobilised to support the Foundation's expanding initiatives. I therefore began contributing towards connecting the organisation with individuals, institutions and potential partners in Nagaland, Mizoram and other parts of Northeast India.

Institutional Development: Beyond Programmes

Sustainable community transformation requires strong institutions, professional expertise, strategic partnerships and effective systems. Collaboration among academic institutions, researchers, development professionals and local communities bridges knowledge and practice. My association with P R Baby Foundation reinforces my conviction that collective expertise and institutional commitment can create lasting grassroots impact.

The Legacy: A Vision That Brings People Together

Four years after Pastor P R Baby's passing, his vision continues to unite professionals, academics and institutions. P R Baby Foundation provides a platform to translate this vision into sustainable community initiatives. I consider it a privilege to contribute my academic expertise, regional networks and professional experience towards creating lasting change in people's lives..

The Foundation provides an institutional platform through which this vision can be translated into programmes, partnerships and long-term community initiatives. The involvement of professionals, academics and development practitioners adds valuable expertise and strengthens the organisation's ability to address complex community challenges.

Looking Ahead: Building Sustainable Partnerships

The next phase of institutional development must focus on strengthening partnerships with universities, agricultural institutions, research organisations, development agencies and local stakeholders across Northeast India.

Such collaborations can facilitate knowledge exchange, professional training, livelihood development, research-based interventions and capacity building at the community level. Equally important is the development of professional systems, effective governance, monitoring mechanisms and institutional capabilities that will ensure continuity and accountability.

I believe that the future of P R Baby Foundation lies in its ability to bring together the right people, knowledge, resources and institutions around a shared purpose.

Pastor P R Baby's life and vision remind us that meaningful transformation often begins with one person's conviction but grows through the collective commitment of many. Though I did not have the opportunity to work with him personally, I consider it a privilege to contribute to the mission he initiated.

Beyond academia, he has actively contributed to farmer training, technology transfer and institutional collaborations, bringing scientific knowledge closer to farming communities.

Education was not merely a priority in Pastor P R Baby's vision; it was a pathway to dignity, opportunity and lasting transformation.

A Vision That Inspired a Commitment

I consider it a privilege to have worked closely with the late Pastor P R Baby over many years. His passion for reaching marginalised communities and his commitment to transforming lives through education and community development profoundly influenced me. He encouraged me to become involved in development initiatives among underserved communities across rural India and introduced me to several organisations working in North India, creating valuable connections and opportunities for collaboration.

One of his strongest convictions was that every child, irrespective of geographical location or economic background, deserved access to quality education. His encouragement and guidance inspired me to carry forward this commitment, particularly in the Northeastern states of India.

Today, as I continue to associate with community development initiatives in Meghalaya, I remain deeply grateful for his friendship, encouragement and the opportunities he helped create. I remember Pastor Baby with profound gratitude, recognising that much of my present involvement in this mission was inspired by his vision.

The Garo Hills: Where Education Needs Greater Attention

The Garo people, known as Achik Mande (hill people), are a prominent indigenous community of Northeast India, primarily inhabiting Meghalaya's Garo Hills, with populations in neighbouring states and Bangladesh.

Despite their rich cultural heritage, many remote communities face challenges in accessing quality education. Long distances to schools, economic hardship, inadequate infrastructure, shortages of trained teachers and family responsibilities contribute to absenteeism and school dropouts.

Addressing these challenges requires better school facilities, trained teachers, accessible learning resources and stronger community participation. Education must reach children where they live, ensuring that every child, regardless of location or economic background, has an opportunity to learn and build a better future.

Gasa English Medium School: A Journey of Faith, Resilience and Hope

Established by local villagers in 2011 at Donsimagre, East Garo Hills, Gasa English Medium School (GEMS) was revived in 2016 by Snehadhan Charitable Trust. Starting with around 70 students, the school gradually expanded to Standard X, inaugurating its first permanent building in 2020.

In 2024, P R Baby Foundation began supporting the school and became actively involved in its management and development.

The school achieved 100% pass results in the Class X board examinations in both 2024 and 2025. In 2025, it also expanded to Higher Secondary education, introducing the Commerce stream.

From a community initiative to a growing educational institution, GEMS reflects the power of collective commitment and partnership, bringing quality education closer to children in Donsimagre and neighbouring villages.

The Road Ahead: Extending the Legacy

Gasa English Medium School is a beginning towards a larger vision of bringing quality education to underserved villages. P R Baby Foundation aims to strengthen existing initiatives, expand Micro Schools and develop community-based learning centres across remote regions.

Achieving this vision requires committed educators, community participation, institutional partnerships and sustained support. Every investment in education is an investment in the future of a generation.

A Tribute of Gratitude

I remain deeply grateful to Pastor P R Baby for his friendship, encouragement and guidance, which inspired my commitment to serving marginalised communities through education and development.

Four years after his passing, his vision continues through institutions, partnerships and people dedicated to transforming lives. Gasa English Medium School stands as one expression of this enduring legacy.

Remembering his vision with gratitude, continuing his mission with commitment, and investing in education for generations to come.

A Mentor, A Vision, A Continuing Mission

Pastor P R Baby was more than a mentor and adviser to me; he was a guiding influence who helped shape my education, business and career. His encouragement and personal guidance have had a lasting impact on my life. I remain deeply grateful for his friendship and the opportunities he gave me to be part of his vision. It is a privilege to actively participate in the initiatives of P R Baby Foundation. To carry forward his vision in Northeast India, Faithcity Achik Foundation, a Section 8 company, was incorporated in Arunachal Pradesh as an institutional platform for extending the mission.

Taking the Vision Forward

Kings Caravan was an innovative vision of Pastor P R Baby, first implemented in Kochi, Kerala, to create awareness against drug abuse and addiction among young people. Inspired by its impact and potential, the initiative was extended to Northeast India as Kings Caravan 2.0, under P R Baby Foundation.

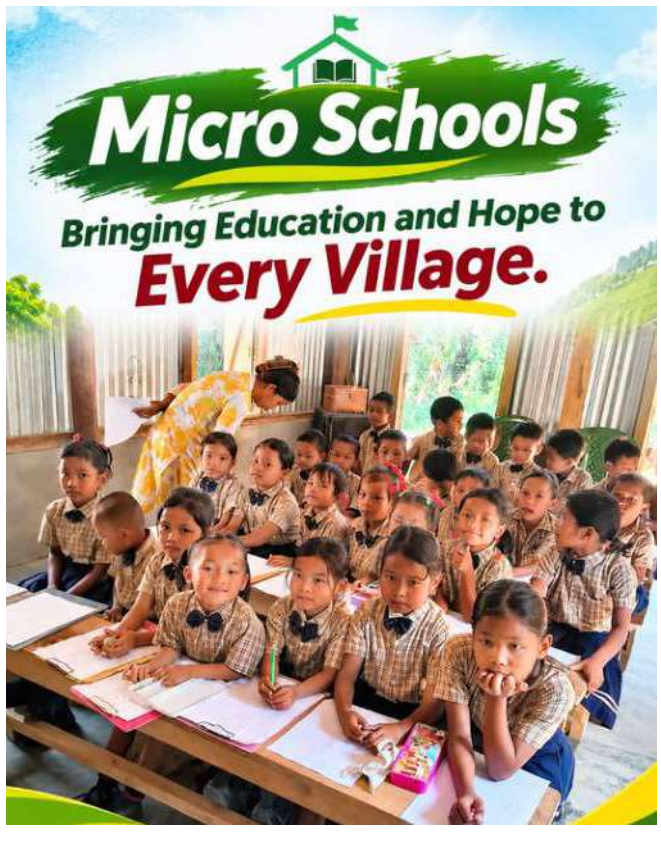
Remembering the mentor, carrying forward his vision, and inspiring a generation to choose life over addiction.



Fulfilling Pastor P. R. Baby's Vision Through Education

In many remote and underserved villages of the Garo Hills in Meghalaya, access to quality education remains a significant challenge. Geographical isolation, inadequate educational infrastructure and economic hardship often prevent children from receiving the educational foundation they deserve. Recognising this need, P R Baby Foundation has initiated the Micro School Initiative, with a vision of bringing accessible and quality education closer to children in rural communities. The programme seeks to ensure that every child, regardless of background or circumstances, has the opportunity to learn, grow and pursue a brighter future.

The Micro Schools are designed as community-based learning centres that provide a child-friendly environment, dedicated teachers and structured learning activities. Beyond basic literacy and numeracy, the programme emphasises English language development, character formation, creativity, discipline and confidence-building. Through interactive teaching and individual attention, children are encouraged to discover their abilities, develop curiosity and cultivate a lifelong love of learning. The initiative has commenced in villages including Moradam and Rongringpal, with an ambitious vision of establishing 100 Micro Schools across the Northeastern states of India. More than an effort to establish small schools, this is an investment in children, families and the long-term development of rural communities.

Micro Schools: Bringing Education and Hope to Every Village

The deeper significance of this initiative lies in its connection to the larger vision of the late Pastor P. R. Baby, whose passion for service extended beyond church ministry to the holistic transformation of people and communities. Although I never had the opportunity to meet him personally, I have become deeply inspired by the depth and far-reaching nature of his vision for community development. I have been privileged to work closely with his elder son, Dr. Giby Raphael, in carrying this vision forward, particularly in Northeast India, with a special focus on the Garo Hills of Meghalaya. My involvement in grassroots development initiatives has strengthened my conviction that lasting transformation begins when we invest in people and create opportunities for those who need them most. The Micro School Initiative is a meaningful expression of Pastor Baby's vision, translating his commitment to community transformation into practical opportunities for the next generation.

The success and sustainability of this initiative will depend on the active participation of parents, village leaders, teachers and local communities, working together with P R Baby Foundation. The larger aspiration is to nurture a grassroots educational movement that reaches children in places where conventional educational facilities remain limited. The vision is simple yet profound: no child should be denied the opportunity to learn because of where they are born or the circumstances in which they grow up. Small schools can nurture big dreams. By bringing education closer to every village, we are not merely shaping the future of individual children; we are helping transform entire communities. In this way, the vision of Pastor P. R. Baby continues to find expression in the lives of a new generation, and today's investment in education becomes tomorrow's legacy of hope, opportunity and transformation.

Continuing Pastor P. R. Baby's Vision – Elevating One Million Farming Families by 2033.

Elevate A Million Pvt. Ltd. (EAM) is an agri-enterprise born out of the vision of the late Pastor P. R. Baby, a visionary leader who believed in empowering marginalised rural communities by creating sustainable livelihood opportunities. He envisioned a society where people, especially small and marginal farmers, could rise above poverty, increase their income and live with dignity and self-respect. For him, development was not merely about providing assistance; it was about enabling people to become self-reliant, economically empowered and valued members of their communities. Inspired by this vision, EAM was established with an ambitious goal of elevating one million farming families by 2033.Committed to transforming Indian agriculture and strengthening rural livelihoods, EAM works to bridge the gap between farmers and markets through sustainable agricultural practices, agri-technology, contract farming, value addition and market linkages. A promising step towards this vision is taking shape in Sagar, Madhya Pradesh, through a contract farming initiative undertaken in collaboration with AVT Natural Products Ltd. and Manav Vikas Seva Sangh (MVSS). Launched as a pilot covering 500 acres and involving approximately 60 farmers, the initiative promotes organised marigold cultivation by providing technical guidance, cultivation support, organised procurement and reliable market linkages. By reducing market uncertainties and improving access to buyers, the project seeks to enhance farm profitability and create sustainable income opportunities. Building on this initial experience, EAM aims to expand the initiative and bring more farmers into a market-driven agricultural ecosystem. Alongside contract farming, the company is committed to FPO development, farmer capacity building, agricultural consultancy and training, with the larger goal of strengthening rural economies and creating lasting prosperity for farming families.

Renewing youth ministry through a generation empowered, evangelising and equipped for God's mission

There is something profoundly compelling about a generation that discovers its purpose beyond itself. A generation that refuses to settle for simply being entertained, informed or occupied, but longs to live for something greater. Across the world, young people are navigating an age of unprecedented connectivity, opportunity and influence. Yet, amidst the noise of countless voices competing for their attention, an important question confronts the Church: Are we preparing young people merely to participate in church activities, or are we preparing them to participate in the mission of God?

This is where the conversation about youth ministry must begin.

Youth ministry needs more than a change of methods; it needs a renewed understanding of its purpose. While programmes, conferences, music and gatherings have their place, the ultimate measure of youth ministry cannot simply be the number of young people who attend. It must also consider the kind of disciples they are becoming, the depth of their understanding of Scripture and their willingness to live faithfully for Christ.

The Church does not need a generation that is merely familiar with Christian language. It needs young men and women who are deeply rooted in the Word, shaped by the Gospel and prepared to carry the message of Christ into their homes, campuses, workplaces and communities.

This conviction lies at the heart of Y-TRIPLE-E Worldwide: Youth Empower, Evangelise and Equip.

A Vision Beyond Gathering Young People

Y-TRIPLE-E is built around a simple yet compelling conviction: young people are not merely the future of the Church; they have a vital responsibility in the mission of God today.

To EMPOWER is to help young people recognise that their lives, gifts, abilities and opportunities can be surrendered to God's purposes. Age should never become an excuse for spiritual passivity. Paul's words to Timothy remain relevant to every generation: "Let no one despise you for your youth, but set the believers an example in speech, in conduct, in love, in faith, in purity" (1 Timothy 4:12). Biblical empowerment is not simply about building confidence; it is about cultivating character, conviction and a life that reflects Christ.

To EVANGELISE is to rediscover the urgency and privilege of making the Gospel known. The Christian faith was never intended to become a private possession. Young people must be encouraged to move beyond the walls of their churches and become intentional witnesses of Jesus Christ. Whether in educational institutions, neighbourhoods, digital spaces or unreached communities, the Gospel must remain central to our mission.

To EQUIP is to recognise that passion must be accompanied by preparation. Young people need more than inspiration; they need biblical understanding, theological foundations, spiritual maturity and practical opportunities to serve. A generation that is enthusiastic but inadequately grounded can easily lose its direction. The task of equipping is therefore essential to building faithful, discerning and fruitful disciples.

These three commitments belong together. We empower young people with purpose, encourage them to evangelise with conviction and equip them to serve with faithfulness.

From Spectators to Participants

One of the greatest challenges facing contemporary youth ministry is the temptation to reduce spiritual growth to attendance and activity. Young people can attend numerous meetings without developing a meaningful understanding of the Scriptures. They can be surrounded by Christian content without necessarily being shaped by Christian convictions.

The renewal we need is deeper than that.

We must create spaces where young people are encouraged to ask difficult questions, engage seriously with the Bible, develop a biblical worldview and discover the significance of the local church. We must help them understand that following Jesus involves the whole of life: their relationships, education, careers, ambitions, resources and responsibilities.

The goal is not simply to produce more active young Christians, but to cultivate faithful disciples who understand the Gospel and are willing to live under its authority.

This is also why the local church has such an indispensable role. Youth ministry should never become an isolated activity detached from the life, worship, teaching and mission of the church. Young people need to grow within a community of believers, learn from godly examples and discover the beauty of serving alongside different generations.
